Evergreen over-55 development will be the first of its kind in Montana

Developer Curt Lund is creating a residential community in Evergreen aimed at solving many common dilemmas of aging.

The Woodlands will be built on 11 acres behind Shopko, with groundbreaking planned in March. The development for people ages 55 and older will be the first of its kind in Montana, offering 144 residential units for sale in four buildings that surround a landscaped courtyard and community center. The grounds will feature walking paths and ample green space bordered by trees on one side and Spring Creek to the south.

"My initial vision was this — a widow or widower is living in their home, and the maintenance becomes a burden," Lund said. "Selling their home is not the problem — it's what do they do after."

At age 78, Lund is in a similar position. He no longer wants or needs his large house, but he doesn't want to move to a rental. He's still enjoying an active, healthy lifestyle and is far from being ready for assisted living.

He also knows how important a social life is to aging well. With that in mind, generating interaction among residents is at the heart of The Woodlands' design.

"The community center is the focus of this project," Lund said. "It's a place for gathering — we'll have a theater, a library and a fitness room, with four individual rooms for family gatherings."

Prices for one of the luxury units, which range in size from 1,088 to 1,400 square feet, will start at about $250,000. Construction begins in March, with the aim of completing the community center in the first months of 2020 so prospective buyers can view its amenities.

The first building is expected to be ready for occupancy in May 2020, and the remaining three residen-
